Scottsdale, AZ (September 16, 2020) — Design Pickle, the leading creative subscription workforce, released information today about a new collaboration with Adobe®. The two organizations are working together to deliver software solutions to in-house team members as well as clients.

In keeping with their commitment to deliver a world-class experience, Design Pickle now provides their global team of over 500 in-house designers and illustrators with Adobe's full creative suite. Clients are also able to access and utilize Adobe Stock within the Design Pickle platform.

This upgrade joins other technological advancements within the Design Pickle platform, such as AI-integration with IBM Watson and Amazon Web Services for secure file storage.

“We are committed to providing businesses with a seamless creative experience while being at the forefront of the subscription workforce concept,” says Russ Perry, Design Pickle Founder and CEO. “With the latest enhancements to our proprietary software and designer workflows, we aim to give customers complete peace of mind when it comes to software compliance, access to creative talent, and scaling creative output.”

In addition to ensuring software compliance, the Adobe solution also provides ongoing professional development, growth, and education to over 500 Design Pickle team members. With access to Adobe's software and educational resources, the update solidifies Design Pickle's commitment to becoming the leading global network of creatives.
